

Electronic Journal for Inclusive Education

Volume 2
Number 9 Electronic Journal for Inclusive Education Vol. 2, No. 9 (Spring/Summer 2012)

Article 7

Spring 2012

Guthrie

Martha G. Michael Ph.D. mmichael@capital.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://corescholar.libraries.wright.edu/ejie>

Part of the Disability and Equity in Education Commons, and the Special Education and Teaching Commons

Repository Citation

Michael, M. G. (2012). Guthrie, Electronic Journal for Inclusive Education, 2 (9).

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by CORE Scholar. It has been accepted for inclusion in Electronic Journal for Inclusive Education by an authorized editor of CORE Scholar. For more information, please contact library-corescholar@wright.edu.

Guthrie

You were born in a pool of our fear, your small frame
like a splayed pinned reddened frog on the frozen chrome table.

My first-born, eight weeks early you came to besiege my poetry and claim my soul.
You forged a deep alley in my psyche, created hymn -like song from kiss, laid out a fable of promise and love from an ancestral memory of Irish martyrs.

In your morph to manhood you led the examined life, merging with your damaged chassy of hemiplegia onto fast lanes with no intention of having a foot on the brake.

Your ego became rounded, full and mulched by an army of sister advocates and knowledge of democracy.

You are honor I carry
as my first born,
the amateur parent mark stamped on your spirit

as a trial run which happened to work.

As I sought resilience in the labyrinth of special education, for you,
for those with secrets like yours,
I stood tentatively on my prayer rug, woven tight with your bright success as the youngest in your position, in the country,
as the one who sought your strength and buried your weakness.

Martha Gallagher Michael, March, 2012