No Solutions, We Can Reduce It: Quality Help & Limited Financial Issues

Shontel Harris
Madison Briscoe
Aleghia Mayle
Dara Lemberg
Katelynn Skeens

See next page for additional authors

Follow this and additional works at: http://corescholar.libraries.wright.edu/raider_academy

Repository Citation
Authors
Shontel Harris, Madison Briscoe, Aleghia Mayle, Dara Lemberg, Katelynn Skeens, Maddy Dobkins, and Alyssa Davis

This presentation is available at CORE Scholar: http://corescholarlibraries.wright.edu/raider_academy/6
Abstract
Suicide is the result of many factors such as bullying, family issues, loneliness, etc. Through research and personal experiences, we believe there is no solution to suicide. Although there are many sources such as lifelines, counseling, and organizations. We have come to the conclusion, there are only ways to reduce it.

One way is to provide better quality counseling. Another way is to limit financial issues.

Data Analysis
The graph below shows that the most suicides occur in middle-aged people. However, the graph to the right show data we have collected showing many believe teenagers commit the most suicides. It is most likely for middle-aged people to commit because of their financial issue.

Conclusion
Suicide is included in the top 10 leading causes of death. However, with the following we know suicide could be removed from the top 10 leading causes of death.

- Trained counseling
- No volunteers
- Lower Unemployment rate
- No bullying
- Less family issues
- More suicide knowledge

Thoughts from Raider Academy

“How do you feel suicide could be reduced?”
Majority of people say with counseling. Noticing that people who are not suicidal or have made attempts feel as if it is not big deal.

www.wright.edu/raideracademy