Political Parties.

The origin of political parties in America occurred when the war with Great Britain and the Declaration of Independence was agitated. During the Colonial struggle for independence on one side were the Whigs or Sons of Liberty, and on the other were the Tories or Royalists.

Party divisions originally grew out of differences arising from different opinions concerning the power of the government, and have been maintained by various organizations on questions affecting interests of the people, such as war, the tariff, the currency, slavery, prohibition, etc.

During the Revolution, the Whig party controlled both civil and military affairs, but was merged into the Federal and Anti-Federal parties. The election of the Constitution. The Federals held that there should be a strong central power with limited state powers; the Anti-Federalists held that the states should be sovereign, but limited.

The Tory party ceased to exist at the close of the Revolution, most of its adherents removing to Canada or England. The first national nominating convention was held by the Anti-Masonic party September, 1831. Before this time candidates were nominated by a caucus, called a Congress, and the election were chosen by the state legislatures.

The national debt was at one time paid off under Andrew Jackson's administration. It was the largest in 1866, under Abraham Lincoln, reaching the sum of $2,785,425,570.

In the stirring times between 1820 and 1860 a great number of parties arose, each representing a distinct policy. The two principal parties now existing in the United States are the Democratic and Republican parties. The for-
Although Miami City can boast of a number of good stores, it is sadly in need of a hardware establishment, where any thing in that line can be obtained. At present we have none but those which carry a very limited stock, and some enterprise person starting up a good store will draw the patronage of the West Side.

Colonel Perry S. Heath has received in instruction from the government of Russia to make a visit to the country with the privilege of a "royal pass." The invitation also states that he shall accompany Duke Alexis, the commander of the Russian army, on a tour through Siberia next summer. The invitation is received with joy and will undoubtedly be accepted. The true mystery of the Russian exile system will not bear inspection and no one is aware of the fact more than are their own officials. This is an undoubted attempt on the part of the Russian government to get a favorable report circulated in order to counterbalance as near as possible the force carried by George Kennan in his articles on the exile system.

The West Side Building Association is making a number of changes in its office room. They have also made arrangements to keep open on Saturday, thus giving an opportunity for our West Side business men to deposit money which they would otherwise have been compelled to take over the river to the banks.

About noon last Sunday a small fire was discovered in the base ment of the Summit Street United Brethren church. It originated from a furnace pipe where the pipe touches a wooden girdle, which is in front of it. The fire got among the joistings, and it could not be reached by water. An alarm was sent in from box 74, corner of Second street and Dale avenue, but the fire being extinguished with buckets of water, the assistance of the department was not needed. The loss was light.

Mrs. C. L. Work, accompanied by her son and daughters arrived here Tuesday. A very cordial and pleasant reception was given Rev. C. L. Work Thursday evening by his congregation.

The natural gas connection was made on the pipe crossing the creek Wednesday. The pipe soon crossed the bridge, thus assuring all chances of another such accident as the one which occurred a few weeks ago.

Mr. Kittinger, several years since a student in Union Biblical Seminary, is president on the Radical side. The trial for quiet of title in a few weeks will determine who shall finally possess the property.

Yesterday noon the city ambulance was summoned to the Malheur Iron Works to convey a man who had become overcome by the heat, to his home. The News reporter was soon at the place and learned the following particulars. The man's name was Henry Webbin, and resides on Mr. Clain street, in the East End. He was a workman in the Malheur Iron Works, and had just finished "pouring off" and had seated himself to eat his dinner, when he was suddenly overcome. He fell to the ground unconscious. The workmen did all in their power for him, and called Dr. Francis to his assistance. Upon the arrival of the ambulance he was placed in it and taken to his home.

Joseph Neibert, Jr. and John Weinhardt were arrested on the charge of robbing Louis H. Miller, an inmate of the Soldier's Home, of a silver watch. The men had a confederate, who was probably the leader in the affair, but who eluded the officers until last night. Captain Zuweder received a telephone message from the lieutenant of the Soldier's Home police last evening to the effect that John Sullivan, the man who was suspected as being engaged in the robbery of Mr. Miller, was in his place of residence near the Home grounds. The Captain ordered a conveyance and summoning Sergeant Grauer and Detective Kal-

Minnie Worley is the pretty night operator at the South Bend telephone exchange. She is twenty two years old, and was born and raised in the wagon city. Miss Middleton occupies a similar position in Michigan City. He is twenty five, and good looking. To keep awake at night the young people would up an acquaintance over the wire and finally became somewhat attached to each other.

One night last week Middleton, in a spirit of fun, proposed to Minnie that they get married by telephone. She consented, and he thereupon called in a Michigan City justice of the peace, named Dibble, who, in order to carry out the supposed joke placed himself in connection with the pair and repeated the legal ceremony.

Afterward nothing was thought of the affair for several days, but finally some one suggested that they had better investigate and see if they were not really married. Accordingly the would be bride consulted legal counsel, who informed her that her name was Miss Middleton, and that she was firmly fastened in the bonds of matrimony. The groom was likewise surprised, and at once hastened to South Bend to see his bride, whom he had never before seen. The lawyers assert that, although the couple took out no license, they are nevertheless married, and that the justice is criminally liable for performing the ceremony without a legal license.
